

I'm Hot

You're the one
That I was searching for
For more than half my life
And I knew
That when I found you
I'd be your friend, your lover and your wife

I never knew what life would bring
And then when I first heard you sing
I knew that my future would be bright
That we'd laugh and we'd dance and we'd work and we'd play
And then in the evening I'd look at you and say
What would you like to do tonight? And you'd say

I'm hot	Feel the sun beatin' down on my head
And I'm humid	In a sweat 'bout all the things that I'd said
There ain't nothing I won't do	There ain't nothing I won't do
I'll take a shower	I could whisper words in your ears
Dress like a Roman	I could take away all of my fears
And give myself to you	And give myself to you

Some days I'm tired
And I feel lonely
Seems like no one understands
What makes me tick
What makes me happy
What makes my heart beat fast and sometimes makes me snappy

And though we take parallel paths
Though be both like cats and hate public baths
We're still two souls both going one way
And we know that in this life the last one the next
We play the same music, recite the same text
And after all of that . . . You say

I'm hot, I'm hot, I'm hot, I'm hot
